Common Core is WRONG

Common core reflects a set of common values for practitioners that promote equality, respect diversity and challenge stereotypes. It helps to improve life chances for all children and young people, including those who have disabilities and those who are most vulnerable. It promotes partnership working at local level.

The Common Core is not a national curriculum, because it is not a curriculum at all. It is only a set of standards, and that's completely different from the scope and sequence of curriculum planning. As angry villagers storm the Common Core Castle with pointy sticks and burny things, CCSS defenders keep repeating the curriculum/standards explanation over and over.

Common Core remains the law of the land in more than 40 states, and while opposition to the standards remains strong—particularly among Republicans who see it as connect to President Obama (Polikoff, Hardaway, Marsh, & Plank, 2016)—the standards are likely to remain in place for the foreseeable future in many states. Given this reality, there will continue to be a need for evidence about the standards and their effects.

Common Core will not improve American K-12 education. It is a socialist/progressive experiment that will impose an inflexible, one-size-fits-all, egalitarian education scheme on America's children. It drastically harms the way both Math and English is taught, and violates the sacred right of parents to have a say in their children's education.
